Paying for college can be an elusive part of the process of earning your degree—but it doesn’t have to be. There are several ways to help or defer the cost of college such as scholarships, savings, grants, loans, and more.
There are many options for non-traditional students and age or gender should not deter you from applying for federal financial aid (FAFSA). Some scholarships are reserved for non-traditional students.

Always read articles to stay up to date on the best ways to pay for college.
