

What is an Outline?

An outline is a plan of action or a “roadmap” for a written essay. Typically, it looks like a list organized into various headings and subheadings for key points, supporting examples, or information related to your thesis. Before you start writing, draw your roadmap!

A typical outline follows this structure:

1. The Introduction

- a. What is the topic of this essay?
- b. What supporting tools or ideas are going to be used?
- c. What is your thesis statement?

Repeat for each main idea that supports your thesis statement!

2. Body Paragraph

- a. Topic sentence: What is the main idea of this paragraph?
 - i. Examples/details/explanations.
 - ii. Examples/details/explanations.
 - iii. Examples/details/explanations.
- b. Transition sentence: How does this main idea relate to the next main idea?

3. Conclusion

- a. Remind your reader of your thesis.
- b. How do the topics of your body paragraphs connect to your thesis?
- c. Answer the question, “so what?”

Now let's start filling in the blanks!

What is an Outline?

INTRODUCTION (topic + thesis statement):

MAIN IDEA #1 _____

Detail

MAIN IDEA #2 _____

Detail

MAIN IDEA #3 _____

Detail

CONCLUSION: